Comments:

We emphasize the formal requirements and the need to comply with them. Please, check and comply with the previous comments.

en finalizing your manuscript follow the journal requirements <https://businessperspectives.org/journals/problems-and-perspectives-in-management#submission-guidelines-for-authors>

Please pay special attention to the fact that this is a research paper, which is a final report on the finished original experimental study (the structure must contain the following sections: Abstract, Introduction, Literature review, Method, Results, Discussion, and Conclusion). The (maximum) length of the manuscript should be up to 6,000 words (not including the Abstract, List of references and Appendixes). Please divide your materials into sections correctly. Clearly and specifically formulate the purpose of your study! The title of your article should be specific, indicate the purpose of the study, and correlate with it. You should mention the purpose of your article in the Abstract, at the end of the Literature review, and in the Conclusion sections. The Abstract (its volume is 150-250 words, but it is better to have 200-250 words) should have the following sequence of material - relevance, purpose, methods, results, and conclusions. This is exactly the sequence you should follow. Most

Keywords should be chosen carefully. You should not give the term, and then also its abbreviation. The number of keywords is limited (about 8-10 words on average). They should not be repeated, just as they should not repeat the exact words from the title of your article. Basically, it should be words, not phrases. They should reflect the main idea and content of your article.

Also, clarify JEL Classification codes. Their number is on average 2-4, and they should be placed in order from the main (important) to the secondary ones. They must be two-digit (for example, M12) and reflect content of the paper.

The Introduction section should be a half-page devoted to the relevance of the research topic and the formulation of the SCIENTIFIC problem (which your study seeks to solve) as a whole. There is no need for a literature review here. Do not tell how the research will be conducted, how the article is structured, what is the purpose of your research, and what tasks you will solve.

The Literature review should include 30-50 analyzed sources. It should start with a few introductory sentences. The sequence of the text must have specific logic (it is not determined by the place of the mentioned work on the shelf), subordinated to the purpose of your study. Do not start each paragraph with a reference to the source, but structure the text in such a way that one paragraph is an analysis of one source. The review should be concluded with 2-3 generalizing sentences. Then, formulate the purpose of the study. After that, formulate hypotheses (right here, all together, and do not insert text between them) if you foresee them. As for the hypotheses, they should be formulated clearly and unambiguously! Your hypotheses should not repeat each other.

Then insert a Method section. Here you should describe the algorithm (procedure) of the study and provide primary data for calculations or indicate the sources of their receipt. This should be done following the logic of the academic presentation of the material.

Further, the main section of the article is Results section. Here, not only the results obtained (analytics, systematization, calculations...), but explain them, describe the data of tables and figures in text. If the hypotheses were predicted, then provide the results of their verification (accepted/rejected).

The Discussion section should include a discussion of the results of your study, a comparison with previous ones, a discussion of why you obtained such results, and an indication of future research prospects.

The Conclusion section should have the following logic - indicate the purpose of the study, briefly present the obtained results, and indicate what conclusions should be drawn. Do not cite sources in this section, and do not repeat sentences from the Abstract.

Don't start chapters with subsections. Don't break sections into a bunch of small subsections. Variables in formulas must have established designations. They should be explained. Captions for figures and tables should be clear and understandable, even if they are shown in the context of the article. Under the figures and tables, do not indicate that this is your own (author's) development or your own calculations because it should be so a priori. Column and row names in tables should be clear and complete.

Carefully prepare each sentence, each paragraph, and the entire text of your article.

Dear Jufrizen Jufrizen,

the manuscript FACTOR AFFECTING ORGANIZATIONAL CITIZENSHIP BEHAVIOR EMPLOYEES OF BUDGET HOTEL IN INDONESIA: EXAMINING THE MEDIATING ROLE OF WORK ENGAGEMENT AND AFFECTIVE COMMITMENT, submitted to Problems and Perspectives in Management Journal, needs to be revised.

Comments:

Carefully study each sentence, each paragraph and the entire text of the manuscript. The text should be clear, logical and academic.

The text of the manuscript should not be submitted in the first person, not like "we", "authors" or "researchers".

Do not enter irregular abbreviations in the manuscript, especially in the Abstract.

The Introduction does not demonstrate relevance. Now this is a set of theses, not confirmed by anything. Add a couple or three links to sources, a couple of data. It was completed incorrectly. Rather, it suddenly broke off.

Pay attention to the construction of Conclusions.
